Workload metrics and workload characterization

This research is focused on developing metrics for differences between computer workloads. We developed a general theory of program space, i.e. space where each point is a computer program. In the program space we use two families of metrics: (1) white box metrics and (2) black box metrics. The main areas of emphasis include characterization, visualization, analysis, and synthesis of Java workloads.

Publications:

