

SAN FRANCISCO
STATE UNIVERSITY

Attention Computer Science Students:
SFSU faculty member looking for experienced web developer.

Help bring digital/medical humanities prototype to the next level! Seeking assistance of experienced developers who can incorporate new features and help make beta site live this summer.

SFSU faculty member is building a narrative database that allows patients and health providers to share their health and medical experiences as stories through written text or art (music, video, images). The site takes submissions from users and then posts them into the proper medical categories and themes. An initial site and database have been built using Ruby on Rails. Currently looking for developer to take this to the next level by implementing the remaining functionality. Please contact Dr. Courtney Donovan at: courtney@mapademic.com, if interested. The position is paid.